Relative to urging the United States Congress to pass the Violence Against Women Reauthorization Act of 2013, in order to continue protecting the safety of women and children across the United States and ensure the provision of necessary services for victims of domestic violence and sexual assault.

BE IT RESOLVED BY I MINATRENTAI DOS NA LIHESLATURAN GUÅHAN:

WHEREAS, it is the belief of this government that securing and protecting the safety of women is a vital pillar of maintaining a healthy and progressive society; and

WHEREAS, the Violence Against Women Act of 1994 ("VAWA 1994") was signed into law by President Bill Clinton on September 13th, 1994, creating for the first time a federal framework for the definition, prosecution, and prevention of crimes against women, domestic violence crimes, and crimes of sexual assault; and

WHEREAS, VAWA 1994 was passed with bipartisan support by both the United States Senate and the United States House of Representatives; and
WHEREAS, VAWA 1994 delineated federal prosecution of interstate domestic violence and sexual assault crimes and guaranteed the interstate enforcement of protection orders related to such crimes; and

WHEREAS, VAWA 1994 united efforts by the criminal justice system, the social services system, and the non-profit sector to provide community-centric means of preventing and addressing domestic violence and sexual assault, supporting the work of domestic violence and rape crisis centers, and other similar organizations; and

WHEREAS, VAWA 1994 encouraged nationwide legislation addressing domestic violence and sexual assault on the state level, with 660 such statutes passed since VAWA 1994's enactment; and

WHEREAS, VAWA 1994 was reauthorized on October 28, 2000 as the Violence Against Women Act of 2000 ("VAWA 2000");

WHEREAS, VAWA 2000 was signed into law by President Bill Clinton and received overwhelmingly bipartisan support in the United States Congress, passing the United States House of Representatives with a 371-1 vote and the United States Senate with a 95-0 vote; and

WHEREAS, VAWA 2000 strengthened VAWA 1994 by expanding definitions to include dating violence and stalking, supporting programs that provided legal assistance, and establishing further protections for immigrant victims; and
WHEREAS, VAWA 2000 was reauthorized on January 5, 2006 as the Violence Against Women and Department of Justice Reauthorization Act of 2005 (VAWA 2005); and

WHEREAS, VAWA 2005, as its forebears, received widespread bipartisan support in both houses of the 109th United States Congress and was signed into law by President George W. Bush on January 5th, 2006; and

WHEREAS, VAWA 2005 expanded protections and enhanced programs for low-income, minority, and victims with disabilities; encouraged the adoption of preventative strategies; provided federal funding for rape crisis centers; and broadened certain provisions to include teenagers and children; and

WHEREAS, the Violence Against Women Reauthorization Act of 2012 ("VAWA 2012") was passed by the United States Senate on April 26th, 2012 and was intended to reauthorize VAWA 2005, receiving bipartisan support with a vote of 68-31, which included the voting support of every Republican woman in the United States Senate; and

WHEREAS, VAWA 2012 includes, amongst other safeguards, protection of additional minority groups such as Native Americans, college students, illegal immigrants and gay, lesbian, and transgender victims of domestic violence; and 1 WHEREAS, the United States House of Representatives blocked the 2 Senate bill and passed its own version on May 16th, 2012, rejecting the 3 protection of such minority groups; and 4 WHEREAS, the House version of the bill was passed largely along party
5 lines, with 216 Republicans and 6 Democrats voting 'aye' and 23 Republicans 6 and 182 Democrats voting 'no'; and 7 WHEREAS, as a result of the House's rejection of the Senate bill, the 8 term of the 113th United States Congress ended without a consolidated 9 version of the Violence Against Women Act for signing by President Barack 10 Obama; and
11 WHEREAS, as of January 2nd, 2013, the Violence Against Women Act
12 has officially failed to be reauthorized, for the first time after eighteen (18) 13 years in effect; and 14 WHEREAS, on January 22nd, 2013, Sen. Patrick Leahy (D-VT)
15 introduced the Violence Against Women Reauthorization Act of 2013
16 ("VAWA 2013"), keeping the provisions for protecting additional minority 17 victims from the original Senate bill in 2012; and the bill has, as of February 18 1st, 2013, received enough votes to pass a filibuster and is thus tentatively set 19 to pass on the Senate floor; and 20 WHEREAS, this body believes that reauthorization of the Violence 21 Against Women Act through VAWA 2013 would be integral in the pursuit of abating domestic violence and sexual assault rates, which have decreased since the passage of VAWA 1994; and

WHEREAS, this body believes that providing protection to additional minority groups is reflective of this body's belief that domestic violence and sexual assault must be abated regardless of age, race, sexual orientation or gender; now, therefore, be it
